Hello, Seattle.

My expeditions through the Emerald City.

Rachael Dowd
Period Four
I was born in Seattle and lived there until I was five. I still consider it home and plan on moving back and going to school there when I am older.

I still have a lot of family members that live there so I always have an excuse to visit.
I spent the day with my sister, Meggan, and her boyfriend, Nick. They were nice enough to let me use them as my photo subjects and give me a few picture tips since they both have taken Digital Photography.
Pike Place Market is one of my favorite places in Seattle. When I think of the Market, I always think of the beautiful flowers that are sold all year long.

I love watching all of the tourists go around the market, it is always interesting to see how excited they are about being in Seattle.
Food.

- Food, need I say more? Seattle has some of the best food I have ever tasted. Especially when it comes to seafood. Not to mention, the endless number of Starbucks stores on every block. Seattle is the place to be for seafood and coffee.
I love listening to the locals playing their instruments and singing their songs. If they are real good, I always give them a few dollars. Who knows? They could need it. Like that kid on the right, he was asking for money to go towards his college fund. The girl on the left had a sign that said ‘art is sharing love with strangers’. I had to give her a few dollars when she started playing and singing ‘Use Somebody’ by Kings of Leon.
The Occasional Surprise Performance.
While walking around downtown, I came across a group of boys dancing in the street, they were terrific and definitely drew a crowd. They even let some of the people watching join in.
Christmas in Seattle.

In the heart of Seattle was this pretty little Merry-Go-Round giving rides to the young and the old, helping to celebrate this holiday season.
‘Tis the season to be shopping for gifts. Finding the perfect gift for someone is about as easy as finding a parking spot in Seattle; its nearly impossible. In the end and after hours of searching the busy city, I managed to find a few gifts for others.
‘The Moore’ was a beautiful theater I visited when I was in attendance to see my cousin’s school production of “A Christmas Carol”. The play was just as good as the architecture in the old theater.
What I love about Seattle is how unique it is from other cities. The architecture of the buildings are both modern and older, having different angles and twists to them as well as the old brick buildings that have been there for years and years. It shows that even though Seattle is modern and contemporary, it still has its past and history within the city walls.
Even though Seattle is a loud and busy city, even the simplest things catch my eye. With the Seattle Art Museum scattering sculptures all over the city, it’s kind of like finding a diamond in the rough when you notice one for the first time.
At the End of the Day.
Seattle is known for its busy days and nights, but as I watched the sun set over the Puget Sound, it was the most calming scenery I had ever seen. Seattle truly is a wonderful place to visit.
